

Maximizing the 90-Day Opportunity: Preparing for the Future of Hospital Care at Home

The 90-day extension of the Acute Hospital Care at Home (AHCAH) waiver allows hospitals and health systems to continue delivering inpatient level care in patients' homes during a critical transition period in Washington. While temporary, this extension underscores the importance of hospital care at home programs and provides a valuable window to prepare for the future. Hospitals and health systems must continue to persevere by prioritizing care-at-home initiatives to address immediate capacity needs and position themselves for long-term success.

Why Should Hospitals & Health Systems Continue to Prioritize Hospital Care at Home with a 90-Day Waiver Extension?

Lengthier Extension is Coming: Bipartisan support signals momentum for a lasting solution.

Critical Relief for Winter Surge: Manage capacity during peak seasonal demand.

Care In Home as Model of Future: Healthcare experts agree that care in the home is here to stay.
